ANR CiSaMe Project - Circulation of medieval knowledge in the 12th century

“Law and theology in Bologna in the mid-12th century”

The ANR CiSaMe project ("Circulation of medieval knowledge in the 12th century", 2023-2027) is recruiting a PhD student from September 1, 2023.

CiSaMe is a collaborative research project (EPHE /PSL Paris - Université d'Orléans - Université de Strasbourg) which aims to elucidate the interactions between knowledge (law, theology, philosophy) in the 12th century, prior to their constitution as disciplines. CiSaMe is based, in particular, on the analysis of a large corpus of 12th-century manuscripts using digital humanities (automated transcription of manuscripts, regular expressions, etc.).

For further information on the project, please contact Professor Raphaël Eckert: raphael.eckert@unistra.fr

Presentation

The aim of this thesis is to study the genesis of disciplinary knowledge (law and theology) in Bologna in the middle of the 12th century. The PhD student is invited to focus in particular on the few authors (Omnebene, Rolandus, Gandulphus) who wrote works of both canon law (Abreviatio or Summa on Gratian's Decretum) and theology (Sentences). The aim of the work is to understand, through case studies, how the tools and problems specific to each discipline were mutually nourished, while gradually acquiring autonomy. This does not mean neglecting the analysis of the social and intellectual environment in which the works were produced, particularly from a prosopographical perspective.

The thesis is part of the CiSaMe project and will benefit from the tools developed within it. The work will draw not only on the methods of intellectual history (sources of works, interactions between law and theology, influence) but also on those of cultural and social history. In addition, the thesis will include the editing of at least one of the as yet unpublished works (e.g. Omnebene's Abreviatio or Sentences) using the digital tools of the CiSaMe project.

The work will be supervised by Professors Raphaël Eckert (University of Strasbourg) and Christophe Grellard (EPHE-Paris Sorbonne Lettres), and prepared within the "École doctorale" 472 (Paris, EPHE-PSL).

The person recruited will be part of the CiSaMe research team, which includes another PhD student, a post-doc and a specialist in digital humanities.

Profile required

The person recruited must:

- Hold a research master's degree in medieval history, history of law, philosophy, theology, philology or classics (if the master's degree is in progress, an attestation from the degree supervisor must be submitted).
- Good knowledge of Latin and Latin paleography.
- If possible, knowledge of digital humanities (HTR, XML, digital publishing).

The thesis may be written in French or English.

Remuneration

The person will be recruited for three years from the date of 1st registration. The minimum monthly salary is €2044.12 gross.

Application form

The application must include the following documents:

- Certificate of Master's degree or equivalent, accompanied by transcript (or certificate from degree director)
